ClearStar.net Announces Collaborative Filtering Feature Streamline™ Reduces Data Entry Requirements and Simplifies Ordering

CUMMING, GA – April 17, 2009 – ClearStar.net, the leading technology provider for the employment and tenant screening industry, announced today the release of Streamline™, the new collaborative filtering process designed to help reduce data entry requirements for screening requests. Streamline simplifies the order selection process through the use of a single Direct Profile Entry Screen.

“With Streamline we can accelerate the data entry process for customers by using derived intelligence – account user preferences, interactions and other historical information – to present suggestions for locations and even alias names,” explains Kevin Lenahan, Chief Technology Officer of ClearStar.net.

The system can be configured to automatically populate past addresses and alias names as well as use information provided by the applicant to make recommendations of services. Screening firms will be able to configure the system differently according to the decision making rules of each customer.

“Our clients are already capturing a wealth of information,” continues Lenahan. “Streamline capitalizes on the intelligence of that information to provide a more collaborative, Web 2.0 experience for our clients and all of their users.”

Streamline is available exclusively to background screening clients on the Aurora™ platform, ClearStar.net’s latest generation of on-demand (SaaS) background screening technology.
